

ABSTRACT

Preliminarily sterilized contents are filed in a synthetic resin container, which has been subjected to rinsing and sterilization. In this instance, the contents are maintained at a filling temperature that is higher than normal temperature, but 5 lower than a temperature expressing sterilization effect, so that the container is prevented from deformation, which took place inevitably when heating the aseptically filled contents.